SYNOPSIS

They're the biggest fish in the sea, yet remain one of its biggest mysteries. Humanity has accumulated more knowledge about outer space than it has our own oceans. We explore how space technology can aid marine research.

There's only a handful of whale shark experts in the world - they came together into one boat to tag, identify and tissue sample Oman's uncovered whale shark population that has been lost to science for decades.

Oman is an age-old gem of Arabia - a remaining cornerstone of heritage for Middle Eastern cultures. Using NASA technologies to "fingerprint" and map individual sharks, will Oman hold any answers to some of the questions surrounding the species?

Descending into the enigmatic world of whale sharks, these gentle giants might finally anchor human hearts to the urgent conservation of all shark species - before they slip further into the abyss.

This documentary sets out to secure protected status for whale sharks in Oman and beyond.
